

Published quarterly, JASSA – The Finsia Journal of Applied Finance – delivers peer-reviewed specialised research across the financial services industry.

First published in 1970, JASSA is well recognised within the finance and investment industry for technical and academic excellence.

JASSA is included in EconLit and Social Science Citation Index.

AUTHOR Guidelines

JASSA is a journal which aims to provide a vehicle for publication and dissemination of research, analysis and perspectives on current financial issues to readers who may be practitioners, academics or students. We value articles which provide relevant insights from academic research for Finsia's practitioner members and articles which provide insights into contemporary financial sector practice and issues of interest to practitioners, academics and students.

While articles with a broader international focus will be considered, the JASSA Editorial Board particularly seeks original, practical and topical articles on matters which will be of interest to the securities, finance and banking industry across Australia and New Zealand. It is anticipated (and reflected in past issues) that most articles will have a finance, economics or accounting discipline focus, but articles with (for example) management, marketing, tax or human resources discipline focus are also welcome.

All articles should conform to the highest standard of scholarship, present original ideas or research and provide appropriate attribution to work of others, be written in a style suitable for a practitioner audience (rather than an academic audience), and clearly state the practical and/or policy implications which flow from the analysis. Articles which explain new ideas, financial sector innovations and development, and the implications of financial sector policy and regulation are particularly welcome. In that regard, survey articles which aim to explain recent insights from academic research in a manner accessible to practitioners, and "perspectives" type articles which provide background and informed, research-based opinion on current issues are sought.

All articles are submitted to a double-blind peer review process. JASSA aims to provide feedback to authors of submitted papers within 8 weeks, and generally sooner. Typically, accepted articles are published within 6 months of acceptance, although this depends upon the pipe-line of accepted articles.

1. Articles should be between 2,000–3,000 words in length. If articles contain many diagrams or charts the word limit should be closer to 2,000 words. Submissions significantly in excess of this word limit will not be accepted.
2. Articles should be written in an easily readable style rather than formal, scholarly or highly technical language. The bibliography should include only items referred to in the text. "Jargon" should be avoided. The bibliography should include only items referred to in the text.
3. Endnotes and appendices should be minimised, and notes included within the text where possible. Authors should use the Harvard style of referencing (although initial submissions will be considered if different styles are used, subject to authors of accepted papers then revising them to meet the required style).
4. Articles accepted for publication will be edited for style, clarity and length. The editors will work as closely as possible with authors regarding changes. However, the submission of articles will be taken as acknowledgment that editing is likely.

5. Articles are accepted for publication in JASSA only on the condition that authors:
 - i. Give Finsia an irrevocable and non-exclusive licence to publish the article in JASSA and on the Finsia website as well as websites of affiliated organisations, and
 - ii. Authorise Finsia to give permission for reproduction of the article in whole or in part by other persons and organisations for educational and training purposes.

In return, Finsia will provide authors of accepted papers with an electronic PDF version of the published paper for use on the author's personal website or for other personal use.
 6. Please ensure that you verify that permission has been obtained for use of copyrighted material from other sources i.e. third-party content (including material taken from the internet). To protect both you and Finsia, it is important that permission is secured when you are using any third-party copyrighted material, including material that you have prepared in the course of your employment. Any conflicts of interest that may bias their work must be disclosed by authors.
 7. Finsia may also allow the reproduction of your published article on selected databases, electronic services or in publications as considered appropriate. JASSA is now included in RMIT's Informit, ProQuest, EBSCOHost and the National Library of Australia's fulltext databases.

As a not-for-profit professional association, Finsia will channel all royalties from reproduction of articles in these services into our Scholarships and Awards Fund that promotes the development of talent in the financial services industry. Authors who do not wish Finsia to retain any royalties pertaining to their published articles should email membership@finsia.com
 8. All original articles published in JASSA will be automatically considered for the award of the annual JASSA prize. The prize consists of a certificate and a cheque for $1,000. Up to three Merit Awards, consisting of a certificate and a cheque for $350 for each article, are also awarded each year.
 9. Only electronic submissions will be considered. Submit three files in Word format by email as follows:
 - i. Complete paper (this file may be in PDF format as well as the Word version)
 - ii. Paper in word format without the name/s of author/s suitable for blind refereeing, and
 - iii. An abstract (NB: This can be the first page of your paper).
 10. i. When articles have been accepted for publication, embedded tables, graphs or diagrams must be supplied as Excel or Illustrator eps files.
 - ii. Titles for tables, graphs or diagrams should be Times New Roman 9pt/10.5pt Bold.
 - iii. Data should be Arial 9pt/10pt Regular.
 11. When submitting your paper please provide the following information:
